

From 27 questions to 5 dimensions

The 27 questions group into 10 belief themes, which combine into 5 broader dimensions. Four dimensions are built from the belief themes shown here; the General anchor is a broad, cross-cutting summary measured by its own questions.

How the DisInforMeter is organised. Left: ten belief themes the questions tap into. Right: the five DisInforMeter dimensions. Four dimensions combine the belief themes shown (the lines indicate which themes feed which dimension); the General anchor is a broad, cross-cutting summary measured by its own questions. The technical measurement detail is in the Methodology Annex.